

Cheating on a Midterm Exam

I am currently a fourth-year student and I would like to share with you one of the lowest points in my life here at the university. I was suspended when I committed an offence against myself, my faith, my culture, my fellow students, and the entire staff at this great university by cheating on my midterm exam.

Although there might be any number of perceived factors that may have explained this offence against all, it would not be appropriate and highly unacceptable to attempt any justification as to why.

For my fellow students I only have one tiny piece of advice that is worth a lot: Don't cheat, even if you think you can get away with it.

- Fourth-Year Economics Student
Fall 2007