

INTERNATIONAL TEACHING ONLINE SYMPOSIUM

June 17th and June 18th, 2021

SYMPOSIUM REGISTRATION

- While the Research Symposium has no registration fee, we ask that those planning to attend complete a short registration form as a way to keep us connected as colleagues once the symposium concludes.
- You can register now via our website.
- Consider serving on one of our discussion panels: Emerging Scholars/Faculty panel or International Students panel.
- If interested, select the panel you would like to join in the registration form.
- If you have already registered and selected that you are not interested but have changed your mind, no worries! Just email symposium@uwindsor.ca letting us know which panel you would like to be added to and we will update our list.

CALL FOR PROPOSALS

Research proposals are still being accepted! If you or a colleague are still interested in presenting on day one of the symposium, visit our website to submit a proposal.

Deadline: MARCH 19, 2021

JOURNAL OF THE MONTH

Cultural Differences in Online Learning: International Student Perceptions

Abstract

This article reports the findings of a case study that investigated the perceptions of international students regarding the impact of cultural differences on their learning experiences in an online MBA program. The study also revealed that online instructors need to design courses in such a way as to remove potential cultural barriers, including language, communication tool use, plagiarism, time zone differences, and a lack of multicultural content, which may affect international students' learning performances... (check out the article for more information).

For more information, please visit our Symposium Website.